INDEX TO VOLUME XLII.

Alison, Archibald, his History of Europe, Vol. VI. reviewed, 719.
Amateur Artists, an address to them, 503.
Animal Magnetism in London in 1837, 384.
Artists, an address to Amateur, 503.
Athenian Democracy, described, 44.
Athens, its Rise and Fall. By E. L. Bulwer, reviewed, 44.
Augsburg Goldsmith, the, a tale of the fifteenth century, taken from the German, 843.
Augusta Victrix, 814.

Barber's Supper, the, a tale, Chap. I. 116—Chap. II. 119—Chap. III. 120—Chap. IV. 123.
Berryer, M., his character and acquirements delineated, 126.
British Colonization of New Zealand, a book so named, reviewed, 784.
British Institution, the exhibition in it criticised, 493.
British Legion, their condition and services depicted, 169.

Cabinet, a Downing street operetta, in one act. By Thomas Dibdin, the Younger, so styled, reviewed, 78.
Calais, my Adventures, Pleasures, and Embarrassments, thither, there, and back. By an Old Contributor, 621.
Callimachus, Hymn II., concerning Apollo, 744.
Church Extension, considered, 376.
Circassia, Travels in that country and Krim Tartary. By M. Edward Spencer, reviewed, 636, 747.
Commercial crisis, the late one, the work of the tyrant majority, 210—its effects on Britain, ib.—on America, 211—Summary of the various crises which have occurred since 1793, ib.—difference betwixt those of 1825 and 1837, indicated, 212—rise of prices consequent on mercantile activity drained this country of gold, and rendered the exchanges unfavourable, 213—this drain originated in the acts of the United States of America, ib.—to counteract their effects, the Bank of England wisely restricted discounts of American bills, 214—the immediate cause of the drain for gold on this country, was the attempt to force on America, an exclusively metallic currency, 215—the reason for this insane measure may be traced to the ascendency of the democratic principle in America, obtained by the elections of 1834, ib.—this principle has been fiercely directed against the aristocracy of the United States Bank, 217—the withdrawal of all Government deposites; the exercise of his veto against the renewal of its charter both in 1833, and 1835; the issuing of a Treasury order that all the taxes and duties payable to Government, would be only received in specie, were the decisive measures of the President against the United States Bank in particular, and a prelude against all banks, 219—to understand the virulence of the democratic clamour against the bank, it is necessary to attend to the time and circumstances when it was raised, when banking was of universal use and of incalculable importance to a rising nation like America, when there was an unprecedented activity in speculation in land and produce, ib.—Both these points illustrated by quotations from M. Chevalier's work on North America, 220—The effects of the accusations against the Bank of intriguing for its own purposes, the tirades of the Press against paper currency, and the Bank being made a question of questions at the Elections, shown by quotations from M. Chevalier, 222—Democratic passion has established centralization in America, 224—A summary of the causes and effects of the late crisis, ib.—Appeal to the mechanics of this country on the distress occasioned to them by the insanity of their Democratic brethren in America, 225—The futility of certain barriers against popular delusion and insanity, the consequences of which are more fatal than the excesses of royal and military powers, ib.
Crystals from a Cavern, 39.

Despatches of the Duke of Wellington, No. V.; campaign of 1808, reviewed, 661.
Destroyer, the, forming the concluding chapter of the Passages from the Diary of a late Physician, 248.
Droit Francais, origines du, 539.

Elections, the present general, important for good or evil to existing institutions, 238—Epitome of Conservative principles, ib.—That our institutions are in danger, proved from the conduct of the Ministerial and Movement parties, 241—Constant political agitation inimical to good Government, 244—or the practical amelioration of our Laws, 245—When the agitation is fostered by

INDEX TO VOLUME XLII.

Alison, Archibald, his History of Europe, Vol. VI. reviewed, 719.
Amateur Artists, an address to them, 503.
Animal Magnetism in London in 1837, 384.
Artists, an address to Amateur, 503.
Athenian Democracy, described, 44.
Athens, its Rise and Fall. By E. L. Bulwer, reviewed, 44.
Augsburg Goldsmith, the, a tale of the fifteenth century, taken from the German, 843.
Augusta Victrix, 814.

Barber's Supper, the, a tale, Chap. I. 116—Chap. II. 119—Chap. III. 120—Chap. IV. 123.
Berryer, M., his character and acquirements delineated, 126.
British Colonization of New Zealand, a book so named, reviewed, 784.
British Institution, the exhibition in it criticised, 493.
British Legion, their condition and services depicted, 169.

Cabinet, a Downing street operetta, in one act. By Thomas Dibdin, the Younger, so styled, reviewed, 78.
Calais, my Adventures, Pleasures, and Embarrassments, thither, there, and back. By an Old Contributor, 621.
Callimachus, Hymn II., concerning Apollo, 744.
Church Extension, considered, 376.
Circassia, Travels in that country and Krim Tartary. By M. Edward Spencer, reviewed, 636, 747.
Commercial crisis, the late one, the work of the tyrant majority, 210—its effects on Britain, ib.—on America, 211—Summary of the various crises which have occurred since 1793, ib.—difference betwixt those of 1825 and 1837, indicated, 212—rise of prices consequent on mercantile activity drained this country of gold, and rendered the exchanges unfavourable, 213—this drain originated in the acts of the United States of America, ib.—to counteract their effects, the Bank of England wisely restricted discounts of American bills, 214—the immediate cause of the drain for gold on this country, was the attempt to force on America, an exclusively metallic currency, 215—the reason for this insane measure may be traced to the ascendency of the democratic principle in America, obtained by the elections of 1834, ib.—this principle has been fiercely directed against the aristocracy of the United States Bank, 217—the withdrawal of all Government deposites; the exercise of his veto against the renewal of its charter both in 1833, and 1835; the issuing of a Treasury order that all the taxes and duties payable to Government, would be only received in specie, were the decisive measures of the President against the United States Bank in particular, and a prelude against all banks, 219—to understand the virulence of the democratic clamour against the bank, it is necessary to attend to the time and circumstances when it was raised, when banking was of universal use and of incalculable importance to a rising nation like America, when there was an unprecedented activity in speculation in land and produce, ib.—Both these points illustrated by quotations from M. Chevalier's work on North America, 220—The effects of the accusations against the Bank of intriguing for its own purposes, the tirades of the Press against paper currency, and the Bank being made a question of questions at the Elections, shown by quotations from M. Chevalier, 222—Democratic passion has established centralization in America, 224—A summary of the causes and effects of the late crisis, ib.—Appeal to the mechanics of this country on the distress occasioned to them by the insanity of their Democratic brethren in America, 225—The futility of certain barriers against popular delusion and insanity, the consequences of which are more fatal than the excesses of royal and military powers, ib.
Crystals from a Cavern, 39.

Despatches of the Duke of Wellington, No. V.; campaign of 1808, reviewed, 661.
Destroyer, the, forming the concluding chapter of the Passages from the Diary of a late Physician, 248.
Droit Francais, origines du, 539.

Elections, the present general, important for good or evil to existing institutions, 238—Epitome of Conservative principles, ib.—That our institutions are in danger, proved from the conduct of the Ministerial and Movement parties, 241—Constant political agitation inimical to good Government, 244—or the practical amelioration of our Laws, 245—When the agitation is fostered by Government, the evil is infinitely worse, ib.—This state of things must be put an end to, 246—Cheering omens for effecting the purpose, ib.—The influence of the Queen's name, how it should and should not be used, ib.—Justice can never be done to the Queen without the strenuous exertions of the Conservatives, 247—The result of the Elections most satisfactory to the Conservative cause, 293—The disadvantages under which the Conservatives laboured in the last Election, ib.—The advantages which they have gained by it, 302—Comparative statements of the Ministerial and Conservative parties in point of union of sentiment and purpose, 304—in point of mutual confidence and good-will, 305—in point of talents, 308—in point of personal character and weight, ib.—in that the Conservative is the rising and the Ministerial the falling party, ib.—Although the Conservative party is strong enough to resist all questions of constitutional change, they will not give to Ministers in the New Parliament a factious opposition, 310—A few words of advice to Conservative friends to attend to the registration of voters, 311—Not to be cast down in places where they have been defeated, ib.—nor to be elated when they have been successful, ib.—To follow up the blow which has been already struck, ib.—To begin the moral preparation for a new general election, 312—To cultivate friendly intercourse, and infuse right principles, 313.

Exhibitions in the Royal Academy, 330—in the British Institution, 493.

Experimentalist, the Involuntary, 487.

France, account of the Prisons and Penitentiaries in, 145—Her affairs and prospects since the Restoration in 1814 considered, 760.

Gautier, Mlle., her strange history and confession, 444.

German drama, Hedwig, by Theodore Körner, 366.

Greenwood Shrift, an anecdote of George III., by Crabbe, so denominated, versified, 208.

Glance at the state and prospects of Ireland, 429—at the close of the first century from the massacre of the Protestants in 1641, to the accession of the Brunswick family to the throne, who governed the country on the principles of the Revolution. Ireland was peaceable, ib.—at the end of the second century now closing, the prospect is dark, ib.—Popery now reigns in the ascendency in Ireland, 430—The assertion of the Ministerialists that the ascendency is amply compensated by comparative tranquillity, confuted, 432—The intimidations in all parts of the country annihilate the just influence of property, 435—The register of votes is one vast compilation of fictitious votes, 437—Why are the polls in the towns and counties kept so long open? 438—The Conservatives should punish frauds and correct evils, 439—The Protestants should not despair, ib.—By a judicious settlement of poor-laws, of tithes, and of municipal corporations, Ireland may yet be saved from Popish domination, 441, et. seq.

Goldsmith, the Augsburg, a tale of the fifteenth century, taken from the German, 843.

Guizot, M., his literary and political life delineated, 767.

Hedwig, a drama, by Theodore Körner, reviewed, 366.

Herder, some of his Homeric Essays, quoted, 702—No. II, 734.

History of Europe from the commencement of the French Revolution in 1798, to the Restoration of the Bourbons in 1815. Vol. VI. By Archibald Alison, F.R.S.E., Advocate, reviewed, 719.

Homer, a Favourite of Time, comprising some of the Homeric Essays of Herder, 702.

Homer's Hymn to Venus, 360.

Involuntary Experimentalist, the, 487.

Ireland, a glance taken at the state and prospects of, 429.

Ireland, what justice to it really is, 828.

Justice to Ireland, 828—has been made the war-cry of those foes of the Constitution, the perfidious Papists, 829—What they really mean by it, 830—If it means redress of grievances, what are Roman Catholic and radical grievances? 831—Protestant grievances proved to be real, 837—Justice to Ireland is the return to those Protestant principles on which the country was formerly governed, 840—Ireland will never be free till the Irish Catholics cease to be slaves, 841.

Körner, Theodore, his drama of Hedwig, reviewed, 366.

Legendary Lore. the Palace of Morgana, 480—II. Benlowe's Books, 483.

Life of a Poet, by Ludwig Tieck, reviewed, 394.

Literary Remains of Isaac Tomkins, Gent. Communicated by his literary executor, Peter Jenkins, 179.

London and Rome compared, 159.

Marmont, Marshal, Duke of Ragusa, his Tour in Hungary, &c., reviewed, 405.
Memoirs of the Life and Works of the Right Hon. Sir John Sinclair, Bart., by his son, the Rev. John Sinclair, A.M., reviewed, 1.
Ministerial Alternatives, 530 — Ministry may act in the new Parliament exactly as they did in the old, 532—they may change their present policy and become more Conservative, 533 — they may change their present policy and become more Destructive in their views, 534—they will probably practise a sullen neutrality on constitutional questions, and profess liberal exercise of power and patronage, 535—In any way the advance of Conservative principles cannot be prevented, 537.
Monypenny on Church Extension, reviewed, 376.
My Aunt's Tale, 342.

National Gallery, the, 693.
Naturalist, the Notes of a, 226.
New Zealand, the British Colonization of, a work so named, reviewed, 784.
"No Patronage" Government, the, 605—lofty promises of the Whigs when they took office, ib.—absurd to look to subsequent events for any fulfilment of them, 606—proof undertaken that the Whigs have been guilty of carrying on a vast system of corruption in every branch of public service, 607—in commissions of enquiry, ib.—in securing votes in the House, by granting personal rewards, 608—Enumeration of the Whig measures which have been associated with schemes for the augmentation of patronage, 610—The dangerous hostility of the Whigs to the church shown in the character of the men appointed to be dignitaries, 612—Their corrupt tampering with the peerage, 615—Their corrupt appointments in the navy, 616—Their corrupt practices in regard to Ireland, 618.

Origines du droit Français, by M. Michelet, Chef de la Section Historique aux Archives du Royaume, 539.
Our Two Vases, 548.

Passages from the Diary of a late Physician, the last chapter, called the Destroyer, 248.
Picture Gallery, conclusion of the first tale, Chap. VII. 20—Chap. VIII. 21—Chap. IX. 27—Chap. X. 29—Chap. XI. 31—Chap. XII. 34—No. II. another tale, 416.
Poet, Life of a, by Ludwig Tieck, reviewed, 394.
Poetry by our New Contributor, 573.
Political Pastorals, No. I. Daniel, being a dialogue between Joseph and Daniel, 526.
Polyglott, Dr Pandemus, his Detections of Plagiarisms, related, 455.
Prisons and Penitentiaries in France, an account of them given, 145.

Revolt of the Tartars, or Flight of the Kalmuck Khan and his people from the Russian territories to the frontiers of China, described, 89.
Rome and London compared, 159.
Royal Academy, the exhibitions in it, criticised, 330.

Sinclair, Sir John, his Memoirs reviewed, 1.
Solomon's Flight, Chap. I. 817—Chap. II. 819.—Chap. III. 822—Chap. IV. 825.
Spencer, Mr Edmund, his travels in Circassia and Krim Tartary reviewed, 636, 747.
Story of Bab-ey-buk, Chap. I. 648—Chap. II. 649—Chap. III. 651—Chap. IV. 654—Chap. V. 656—Chap. VI. 658.
Strange History and Confession of Mademoiselle Gautier, 444.

Thuddy Jones, the clever young man, a story, Chap. I. 466—Chap. II. 467—Chap. III. 469—Chap. IV. 471—Chap. V. 474—Chap. VI. 477—Chap. VII. 478.
Tieck, Ludwig, his life of a poet reviewed, 394.
Tomkins, Isaac, Gent., his literary remains communicated by his literary executor, Peter Jenkins, 179.
Tour of Marshal Marmont, Duke of Ragusa, in Hungary, Transylvania, Southern Russia, Turkey, Asia Minor, and Syria, reviewed, 405.

Vases, Our Two, 548.

Wellington, Duke of, his Despatches of the Campaign of 1808, reviewed, 661.
World we live in, the, No. IX. 61—No. X. 195—No. XI. 309—No. XII. 506—No. XIII. 673—No. XIV. 796.

392—7

Printed by Ballantyne and Co., Paul's Work, Edinburgh.